

Wrestlemania #7: Should Real Life News Be Incorporated Into Angles?

As you know, this show was built around the real life Gulf War. This was viewed as stupid because the war was already over, but that's not the point. Should there be angles based on real life events? As usual, I think the answer is somewhere in the middle. Having the real life stories play a role is fine, but having something like this is ridiculous. The war ended a few months ago so it wasn't like this was even fresh news at this point. The show wasn't that good and with the ending never in doubt, the timing was bad on top of it all.
