

Thought of the Day: Favorite Does Not Mean Best

This is something I've gotten asked a good deal recently and I want to clarify it. My favorite baseball team is the Cleveland Indians. That means I like them better than all other teams. That does NOT mean I think they're the best. Anyone who follows baseball can tell that there are many better teams. The same is true in wrestling. My favorite wrestler is Mick Foley, but I certainly don't think he's the best ever. There's a very big difference between best and favorite, which needs to be remembered.
