

Raw Draws Highest Rating In Six Months

Gee, it's almost like Rock is a huge deal and Punk isn't.

– Last night's episode of WWE Raw scored a 3.68 rating with 5.02 million viewers. Those numbers are up 21% and 16%, respectively, from the 3.04 and 4.3 million viewers the week before. It is the first time that Raw has topped five million viewers since the 1,000th Raw and before that, the night after WrestleMania 28. The show did hours of 4.86 million, 5.27 million and 4.93 million.

The show ranked #1 among cable TV shows for the night, both in overall viewers and in the key male demographics. The key demos were up huge, both of them up 0.6 from last week.

Highest rating in six months, up 20% from Punk's last show as champion. But hey, I'm sure Punk should be considered the real talent in there right? Or at least on the same level as Rock right?
