

Thought of the Day: The Original Kofi Kingston

I was watching Wrestlemania V (for the Wrestlemania Redo Series starting March 10) and during a match I saw a guy that came off as the Kofi Kingston of the 80s. This man would be Tito Santana. He was a multiple time tag team champion, a multiple time Intercontinental Champion, and very popular in his own right. Tito also got the occasional world title match but was never a serious contender for the world title. This is the exact same kind of character that Kofi is now and it got Tito into the Hall of Fame and made him a legend. There's nothing wrong with staying at the same level that Kofi is at now and if he stays there for another few years he'll be just fine.
