

It's Wrestlemania Sunday

This is our day. Today is the day that the entire wrestling year builds to. In just over twelve hours, the entire wrestling world focuses on one show only. To think that this was started nearly thirty years ago now is mind boggling, especially when you consider how small things started out. Wrestlemania has gone from a glorified house show with Mr. T. in the main event to a show that averages over 70,000 people in recent years and a million people paying money to watch a pay per view. It's the biggest event of the year and I spend all year looking forward to it.

Anyone else excited?
