

Thought of the Day: My Favorite CM Punk Moment

It's not one you would expect. Back at Over the Limit 2010, Punk was fighting Rey Mysterio and got cut open. As usual, the match was stopped for a doctor to look at it. The crowd starts to chant BORING, and Punk goes nuts. In just a few seconds he hits about five moves on Mysterio, all faster than you'll ever see Punk move anywhere else. Punk took offense to the crowd thinking his match was boring because it had to be stopped and he wasn't going to accept that because it meant he wasn't doing his job. That's something so few people take pride in anymore. How many people have you seen in a match with a five minute run time and they just throw on a chinlock for a minute of the match? It's a cheap way to get through a match and not fair to the people that paid to see you have an entertaining match.