

More Notes From Post Summerslam Raw

Especially that last segment. 1. Are people really as confused as they seem about who is going to help Bryan? It's really not that complicated.

2. Does anyone feel stupid for buying the rumor about Shield being downgraded in favor of Wyatt Family which was blamed on HHH? Last night Shield became the personal security force for the super heel stable and fought three former world champions while Bray Wyatt squashed a jobber to the stars in two and a half minutes. It's like WWE....LIED! That's not fair!

3. It's been a long time since we've had a heel super stable in WWE. Has there been one since Evolution? La Familia was on Smackdown so it means nothing.

4. It's amazing how time can heal all wounds in WWE. Randy Orton came as close to raping Stephanie as you can while her husband was tied up and punted Vince in the head, but now it's ok for the sake of business. I love wrestling logic.

5. When is the last time heels held all titles in WWE? It's been a very long while.

6. You know what I like about the new stable? They act like heels. Seriously it's that simple: they tell us what's better for us, says the wishes of other people don't matter, they say they're going to do what they want no matter what because they own the place and they throw their authority around with no fear of repercussions at all. They're EVIL, not making logical points with well thought out arguments that could sway the fans to their side. It's the will of the people vs. the people that tell us they know what's best for us. That's good vs. evil and the best stories come from basic ideas such as that.