

Thought of the Day: TNA Needs Some Usos

More on my comment last night of TNA has no soul. If you've been watching Impact lately, it's pretty clear that there's not a lot of life in TNA. A big part of that is there's very little that's supposed to be fun. Other than Bad Influence, no one seems like they're having fun out there. You have Aces and 8's vs. Anderson in a feud about trying to injure someone's neck, you have a world title tournament which is always serious, Angle's feud involves him nearly being paralyzed twice. Nothing comes off as lighthearted or fun.

This is where the Usos come in. Now before you ask, no I'm not suggesting they jump because that's not the point. However, let's look at the Usos for a bit. They have good matches, the fans are into them, and they're definitely not a serious act. They do their Siva Tao thing to fire up the crowd, fly around the ring, then dance when they win. It's a fun act that always fires the crowd up and just lets them have fun enjoying wrestling for a change. TNA needs something like that. Just let some guys go out there and have fun without some serious story behind them. It would be a very nice breath of air on Impact.