

Thought of the Day: Why the Titles Need to Be Unified

Haven't done one of these in awhile but it's the biggest story in wrestling so it needs something said. On Smackdown, Cena says that 99% of wrestlers in WWE history have never been a world champion. That's not too far from the truth.

On the other hand, if you look at the active roster (I used the one on Wikipedia, which includes names like Ezekiel Jackson and Evan Bourne who haven't been around in forever as well as part timers like Undertaker, Rock and Lesnar), about 30% of the male wrestlers have held a world title. Think about that for a minute. Pick any ten WWE wrestlers and odds are that three of them have been a world champion.

If that doesn't sum up why the titles should be unified, nothing will.