

CM Punk Goes Home, Pulled From WWE Schedule

That's the big story today.

<http://www.411mania.com/wrestling/news/311438>

Short version: Punk is sick and tired of the direction the company is going and doesn't like the part timers taking the big spots. Now of course there's the chance that this is all a work, especially given that it's Punk, but he's coming off as rather whiny here if it's true. Punk was WWE Champion for well over a year and was without a doubt the #2 guy in the company. I understand the problem with wanting to be the top guy and seeing people like Batista coming in and getting that spot, but this isn't the way to go about it. At least get through Wrestlemania and be written off TV.

However, I think he'll be back for Wrestlemania and the showdown with HHH. Either that or Bryan will take Punk's spot and pin HHH clean. The question is: will that be ok with the fans?