

Thought of the Day: Oh Yeah That Happened

Regarding Brock Lesnar. So I'm watching Countdown (really fun way to kill an hour and a Tuesday tradition for me) and the topic is Returns. One of them is Brock Lesnar and someone said it was in 2012. It hadn't occurred to me that Brock's second tenure is actually longer than his first (he debuted the night after Wrestlemania XVIII and left after Wrestlemania XX).

One of the people talking about Brock coming back was Punk, and the first thought in my head was that Punk would know how awesome Brock is as Punk fought him at Summerslam. The same is true of Cena. Then I heard the year 2012 and I wondered how it could have been that long. Then I thought "oh yeah. He had that year long feud with HHH."

The trilogy between HHH and Brock Lesnar might have been the least interesting big match trilogy of all time. It's just totally forgettable and left no impact at all. It's sandwiched between the match of the year in 2012 and the match of the year in 2013 and means nothing, all things considered. The match headlined Summerslam, was the second main event at Wrestlemania XXIX and headlined Extreme Rules. That REALLY should be something memorable but there's just nothing there. I remember Brock vs. Big Show better than I remember the HHH feud, and I literally couldn't remember Brock vs. Big Show two days after it happened.

Remember to follow me on Twitter @kbreviews and pick up my new book of on the History of Survivor Series at Amazon for just $3.99 at:

And check out my Amazon author page with wrestling books for under $4 at: