

Thought of the Day: So That Was... .Wow They Really Did That

Time for some house show discussion. I was looking at the results from an NXT house show today. It wasn't the most in depth card in the world, but the main event was Becky Lynch vs. Sasha Banks. Let me say that again: the main event was Becky Lynch vs. Sasha Banks.

Think about this for a second: the main event of a house show was a Divas match. Yeah, that sounds like a disaster in WWE, but if you saw that as the main event of an NXT show, would you really be disappointed? The fans that I see that as the main event of a card and think "oh ok" tells you quite a bit about the way NXT runs. As I've said before: if you build them up properly, the Divas can work very well. That's not what we've gotten anytime in the last ten years or so though and it holds them back quite a bit.
