

So GWF Launched This Weekend

And.....yeah. The promotion was announced the day after Wrestlemania XXX and I have no idea what they spent all that time setting up. From what I've seen (including part of a stream of their first show), it's really nothing out of the ordinary. It's not terrible or anything but it looks like a fairly big time indy in a baseball stadium. There are some faces you might remember mixed with some local talent and some bigger names near the main event. Now of course there have just been two house shows, but this really doesn't look like anything great so far. If nothing else having some champions crowned in a few weeks will help, but it seems pretty meh so far.
