

Checked Out The Remembering Dusty Rhodes Special On The Network

And yeah, it's awesome. However, there's one major thing that got into my head here. How amazing is it that WWE can throw something like this together in about four days? It's the beauty of having the Network instead of having this be something like another lame WWE.com feature or a five minute segment on Raw and Smackdown. They made this feel important and did it this fast. That's a far better treatment for someone like Dusty and this worked very well.
