

So I Started Watching The List

I was thinking it would be a half hour version of Countdown. And it's a half hour version of Countdown. I have no idea why they dropped Countdown, which is pretty much the easiest show in the world to do and the format was as basic as you could ask for, but instead we now get this, which is the exact same thing but with almost all new names instead of anything historic.

To give you an idea of what I was in for, the first show was called Trendiest Divas, meaning we're already in Twitter territory. The top of the list of course? The Bellas, with a special video on Stephanie to close things out. Yeah....I need to just watch Countdown reruns.