

Took In A Chikara Show Tonight

It was quite the fun time for a reasonable price. I'll have a full review up once I can actually see the show but it was an entertaining night in a small building, meaning a good way to spend an evening. Chikara is definitely not your run of the mill style promotion as it's much more family friendly (the fans were asked not to say something sucked) and it's a bunch of wrestlers in colorful costumes with high impact offense. The wrestling is almost more of a backdrop to the entertainment which makes for an interesting setting. If you know what you're getting into though, it's a fun show and could be very addictive in a hurry.