

Wrestlemania XXXII Preview: Usos vs. Dudley Boyz

Uh...yay.

I really don't want to see this match. I know it's going to be good and I know the story is good enough but ever since this was put together I've felt like it's nothing I want to see. The Usos are long past their point of being interesting (though they're still very talented) as their characters really hit a wall, which wasn't the biggest surprise in the world. The tables stuff has stopped being worth anything either so the whole thing isn't doing much for me. At least it's on the pre-show though so it won't get that much time.

The Usos are going to go over here and much like Jericho vs. Styles, there isn't much of a reason to think otherwise. The Dudleyz can do whatever they want and are going to stay over so there's no need to give them a win on this level. I'm sure it's going to be an entertaining match but it's really just not something I want to see. That Uso splash looks really cool in person though and the dives will help carry it to entertaining though.
