

Well That Changed Everything

So I go to dinner with the in-laws and apparently the wrestling world just went nuts.

Due to a bad viral infection, Roman Reigns and Bray Wyatt will be off the pay per view with Kurt Angle and AJ Styles appearing as his replacements. I mean...wow indeed. Styles replacing Wyatt to face Finn Balor is fine, albeit a bit annoying as we're likely to see Wyatt vs. Balor again later. That was the second biggest match on the card and having Styles on a show never hurt a thing.

Then you have the Shield reunion being ruined and...sweet goodness this is a big deal. The Shield was the entire focus of this show and now that's been thrown out the window. This is a heck of a change of plans and there's only so much you can do when your top story is out the window. Angle is a very surprise replacement but I'm not sure if having him in a TLC match is a good idea. Hopefully he'll be safe (not likely given his high level of insanity) but this is quite the surprise.

Overall, I have no idea how well this is going to go. It's something that can change every now and then and they only have so many options when you have a rash of illnesses like this. Hopefully the show winds up being ok but what does it say when the replacements make the show that much more entertaining?
