

Wrestlemania XXXIV Preview – Overall Thoughts (Includes John Cena vs. Undertaker)

And everything else.

Overall Thoughts

I'm pleasantly surprised by the card so far. There's a potentially great show in there, but again the run time is just going to kill it. Thankfully the ramp shouldn't be quite so long this year, which could legitimately shave a good fifteen minutes off of the show. Some of the matches are classics waiting to happen and if that's what we get in New Orleans, we're just that lucky.

Then there's the elephant in the room with John Cena vs. the Undertaker. I've made no secret of the fact that I don't want to see this match. WWE had their chance to do this match several times ("Wrestlemania XXX", Wrestlemania XXXI", "Wrestlemania XXXIII" and probably more) but they chose to go other ways, like giving "Total Divas" a storyline instead. I don't need to see Undertaker doing this again and it would be nice if he stayed retired.

The ONLY thing I could live with here is a brawl which sees neither coming out ahead. There doesn't need to be a future match and there doesn't need to be a match here. Just let it be over and done with while Cena does some stupid antics for part of the night, basically being the unofficial host for the show. But yeah, there's going to be a match and Cena is likely winning. There's no way around that and I have no idea why I'm supposed to get excited about ONE MORE FIGHT when there's probably a three disc DVD set of Undertaker's ONE MORE FIGHT ready to be made.

Overall, I'm excited, and that's a nice feeling to have.
