

Wrestlemania XXXIV Preview: Raw Women's Title: Alexa Bliss vs. Nia Jax

We have arrived. It's FINALLY time for the biggest night of the wrestling year and that means we're in New Orleans for "Wrestlemania XXXIV". There's a huge card with some top level title matches, Daniel Bryan's long awaited in-ring return and a few questions about what we may or may not be seeing. The card is actually stacked, but it's hard to say what we might be seeing with all of the wild cards that might be thrown our way. It's time to break the whole thing down so let's get to it.

Raw Women's Title: Alexa Bliss(c) vs. Nia Jax

I figured I'd start with what should be the shortest match on the card. This story is built around the idea of Bliss bullying the much bigger Jax for both her looks and her size, which has gotten to Jax after having heard this all her life. It's turned Jax into a monster who wants to destroy Bliss once and for all. Jax has never won a title and Bliss has taken out almost everyone else, but now it's time for the showdown.

Based on the story that has been told, this should be Jax squashing Bliss in under two minutes. Bliss can get in a few shots, but Jax should just snap up, throw Bliss into the corner, and wreck her in short order. There's no reason to believe that Bliss can hang with her in a straight fight. Jax needs to destroy her once and for all, which is exactly what this has been setting up for.