

Six NXT Names Coming To The Main Roster

They did promise something fresh and this is indeed fresh....if you ignore the one who was already announced and the one already on the main roster. This week it was announced that the following names are coming to the main roster. No word on which shows they'll be on or when they're coming up.

EC3 – He was ready the day he signed with the company and there was little reason to put him in NXT in the first place.

Heavy Machinery – They're a fun team and if they're pushed right, they'll be fine. I'm worried that Vince will hear the Steaks And Weights thing and think that's all they are instead of the fun team that they can be.

Lars Sullivan – We knew this one already but it's still the right move. After losing down in NXT, there's no reason to keep him down there any longer. Makes perfect sense and he can be a monster on the main roster.

Nikki Cross – She already appeared on Smackdown once so this isn't the biggest surprise either. The insanity stuff can help a lot in the right doses, at least until Nikki Bella decides she needs a name change to not affect the Bella Brand.

Lacey Evans – This one is the most likely to fail, but Evans isn't going to the top of the NXT women's division anytime soon so they might as well put her on the main roster where they have more time for her. Until she's forgotten and squashed on a regular basis that is.

Overall, not a bad collection but it feels a bit like the NXT spring cleaning instead of anyone who flat out belongs on the main roster.