

So THAT Just Happened (This Was A Big Surprise)

Wrestlemania just got shaken up in a....way? Charlotte defeated Asuka for the Smackdown Women's Title in a rather good match. In theory, this could mean a double champion at Wrestlemania as it was implied (though not outright said) that both titles would be on the line. No word on if the Smackdown Women's Title will be defended separately, but this could mean one less Wrestlemania match.

I'm not sure what to think about this, but if it means one Women's Champion, it's a good thing. Right now you have Rousey, Lynch, Charlotte and Asuka, then a big cliff to the next batch. With Rousey seemingly gone and one of them as the champion, there's not much that can be done with two titles. Let the rest of the women fight over the Tag Team Titles (not a bad thing at all) and get something back to sensible with a traveling champion. Do that with the Tag Team Titles and we might be getting somewhere.