This is NOT a storyline and wow. I mean...wow. It was clear that something had to be done to shake things up and this is certainly something. Heyman has had a lot of success in a creative role before and Bischoff has experience running a major company. The line you'll hear about them though is they need a leash and while both will answer to Vince, that might not be the most sane source at the moment. Either way, SOMETHING needed to change and it should be interesting to see who we get freshly pushed now. I'm excited, though cautiously so.
