

Monday Night Raw – June 15, 2026: Unbusted Brackets

Hey everyone. I apologize for this being far later than usual. I'm on the road for my mom's birthday for the first half of this week and the drive took a bit out of me yesterday so I was in no way able to do the show. I'll be back home Wednesday and I'll be getting back up to speed as soon as possible. Tuesday's shows will be a bit delayed but hopefully not as badly. I'm sorry again and thank you for your patience.- KB

Monday Night Raw

Date: June 15, 2026

Location: CFG Bank Arena, Baltimore, Maryland

Commentators: Joe Tessitore, Corey Graves

We're back in America for Raw and the big story this week is the Of The Ring tournaments, with a pair of semifinal matches. The finals are coming up in less than two weeks so the Raw sides will be wrapped up here. In addition, I'm sure that rascally Bloodline will be up to something. Let's get to it.

Here are last week's results if you need a recap.

We open with a look at Jey Uso advancing in the King Of The Ring on Smackdown.

The Bloodline arrives and does the walk from their cars into the arena. After hitting the catchphrase, Roman Reigns talks about how there is a lot to be grateful for around here. That starts with Jey Uso making it to the next round of the King Of The Ring. The thing is, Jimmy Uso never gets much credit, but without Jimmy, there would be no Right Hand Man or Tribal Chief so acknowledge him for a change.

That leaves Jacob Fatu, with Jey saying Fatu is the one person who hasn't acknowledged them. Reigns thinks that sounds like a problem and Fatu makes it clear that he doesn't listen to the Usos, The only person he listens to is Reigns himself, but Reigns says we don't need yes men around here. Reigns pulls out another necklace and talks about how everyone is scared of the Bloodline taking over again.

Well, the Bloodline has always been around, from the Wild Samoans today and it will continue to be the same when Fatu's kids are teaming with Reigns' kids. Reigns officially welcomes him to the Bloodline and puts the necklace on him. The pose ensues and the team leaves, with Reigns and Jimmy shaking hands with actor Eric Andre.

Jey isn't interested and Andre slaps Fatu on the back, earning himself a heck of a beating. Reigns has to cut Fatu off from the Superfly Splash...but Fatu does it anyway. This seems to make Reigns happy as he leaves, to the point where he tells Fatu to do it again. The Andre thing helped, as otherwise this was a lot of time spent to not really say much.

Queen Of The Ring Semifinals: Iyo Sky vs. Raquel Rodriguez

Sky jumps her to start fast but Rodriguez is back with a crossbody. They head outside with Rodriguez dropping her onto the barricade before taking it back inside. Sky knocks her back outside but a dive is cut off and Sky gets planted as we take a break. We come back with Sky getting two off a rollup and stomping her in the ribs.

Sky dropkicks her into the corner but a sunset bomb to the floor is broken up. A double stomp onto the announcers' table is broken up as well as Rodriguez trips Sky down. Back in and the spinning Vader Bomb misses, allowing Sky to hit a powerbomb out of the corner. Over The Moonsault finishes Rodriguez at 10:13.

Rating: C+. Sky getting back into the title picture is a smart move as she's one of the best overall stars in all of WWE.

This was a good example of her getting past a monster opponent and looking impressive in the process. Rodriguez will be fine going forward as Sky gets the spot she should have.

We look at Judgment Day's cheap shot on Oba Femi failing miserably last week.

Liv Morgan tells Roxanne Perez that the focus should be on Morgan and Dominik Mysterio now that they're the only ones left in the tournaments. Morgan goes in to see Danhausen, revealing a Danhausen shirt (Danhausen: "I hope you paid for that."). She seems to offer something in exchange for him cursing people but he wants so many "human monies" that she just leaves, with Danhausen calling her Olivia.

We get a look at the trailer for a new Danhausen documentary on his cursing the New York Knicks, sending them onto a losing streak. Then he uncursed them and they went on a huge winning streak and won the NBA Title. Danhausen has become a thing with this and sure why not. WWE would be insane to not milk this for all it's worth.

Seth Rollins is ready to end things with Bron Breaker for good at Night Of Champions. In a cage.

Adam Pearce has done something for Lyra Valkyria, who can't wait to tell Bayley. With Valkyria gone, LA Knight comes in and points out that everything on Smackdown went as he said it would. Knight is going to fix things his own way.

We look at Penta beating Rey Mysterio last week, with Rusev attacking Mysterio after the match. Chad Gable made the save.

Gable says he realizes he's been wrong for a long time in the last year. Tonight he's going to take care of Rusev but there are some other people he needs to apologize to. As he leaves, he runs into Maxxine Dupri and Austin Theory.

Chad Gable vs. Rusev

Ethan Page is here with Rusev, who throws Gable down to start. Gable is back up with a waistlock and some armdrags, followed by a rather nice belly to belly. A dragon screw legwhip has Rusev down and they're out on the floor. Rusev sends him into the steps and grabs a suplex, followed by a toss over the announcers' table.

We take a break and come back with Gable slugging away and rolling some German suplexes. A superplex drops Rusev and sets up the ankle lock, which is broken up rather quickly. Gable can't get the rolling Chaos Theory but can get the ankle lock again. This time Page offers a distraction though and the Machka Kick gets two. The Accolade is broken up and Gable Angle Slams him into the ankle lock for the win at 10:34.

Rating: B-. This is the kind of stuff Gable needs to do to reestablish himself as a star, as he's been a goof for so long now. The good thing is that the fans are accepting him and at least for now, he's just Chad Gable. That's what he's needed to be for a long time, though I'm curious about what WWE has next for him, as it could go a lot of different ways.

Post match the beatdown is on, with Rey Mysterio and Dragon Lee making the save.

Roman Reigns tells the Usos that he called an audible with Jacob Fatu because sometimes you need to change the play. Reigns doesn't like LA Knight either so Jey Uso is ready to deal with him. Jimmy Uso has this though.

Bron Breaker is ready to hurt Seth Rollins. The cage match is set for Night Of Champions.

Here is LA Knight for a chat and he lays down in the ring, saying this is how things ended for him on Smackdown. He could have laid there all night but he had to get to Baltimore. No he isn't the King Of The Ring or a champion, but what matters is that he is home. He's used to being against the odds because that's what he does, just like he's doing against the Bloodline.

That's what happened on Friday and here is Jimmy Uso to interrupt. Uso knows Knight has issues with the Bloodline but that was years ago. Knight thinks Solo Sikoa is back with the Bloodline but Uso says that's not what's going on. Cue Jey Uso to interrupt, saying that Jimmy is right: Sikoa isn't part of the Bloodline.

Knight thinks Jey wants him to acknowledge Roman Reigns but the reality is that Jey wants Knight to acknowledge Jey himself. That's not what Knight expected but he acknowledges Jey...can kiss his a. The brawl is on with Jimmy trying to play peacekeeper. Jey grabs a chair but Knight takes it away and drops both of them. Cue Jacob Fatu to Tongan Death Grip Knight and leave him laying.

Post break Fatu says that was him doing this his way because the Usos' ways didn't work.

We get an NXT Origins video on Alexa Bliss.

Charlotte vs. Roxanne Perez

Alexa Bliss and Liv Morgan are here too. Charlotte blocks a knee to start and strikes away, with Perez being knocked outside. Charlotte's chop hits the post though and Perez goes after it as we take a break. We come back with Perez staying on the arm until Charlotte gives her a sitout powerbomb for the escape. A spinning faceplant gives Perez two and it's right back to the arm.

Charlotte gets up a boot in the corner though and fires off the fall away slam. The flipping lariat drops Perez again and a big boot gives Charlotte two. Morgan offers a distraction to break up the moonsault though and Perez's split legged moonsault gives her two of her own. Charlotte fights back and tried the Figure Eight, only for Morgan to offer a distraction. Bliss cuts that off and the Figure Eight makes Perez tap at 10:09.

Rating: C+. There wasn't much to this one and that's fine as Charlotte beating anyone makes sense. Perez put up a good fight and Bliss/Morgan were able to cancel each other out. The action was fine and Charlotte gets a win as she's on a push in the Queen Of The Ring, as she should be.

Here is Je'Von Evans for a chat. He knows Jey Uso has the experience advantage but he's going to Yeet Uso out of the King Of The Ring. This brings out the returning Logan Paul (with his arm in a big brace) and Austin Theory to interrupt. Paul praises Evans as a huge star and offers him a spot in the Vision. Evans emphatically turns it down but apparently that wasn't a question. The threat of violence has Evans wanting a referee out here so let's do this.

Je'Von Evans vs. Austin Theory

We're joined in progress with Evans snapping off a hurricanrana to send Theory outside. The suicide dive connects and Evans gives him a standing moonsault for two back inside. Evans misses something from the top rope though and Theory hits a rolling clothesline. Theory starts hammering away but Evans is back with some left hands in the corner. A big shot puts Evans on the floor though and we take a break.

We come back with Evans hitting a springboard clothesline but Theory plants him with Ataxia. Back up and Evans sends him outside for a run around the ring and a huge dive to knock Theory into the timekeeper's area. They go back inside with the OG Cutter being loaded up but here is Bron Breaker to spear Evans out of the air for the DQ at 13:15.

Rating: B-. As usual, Evans' abilities to get into the air are incredibly impressive and some of the best things going on Raw today. I do like Theory avoiding another pinfall loss, as Evans getting a win isn't a bad thing but Theory has lost enough. Evans vs. Jey Uso should be good as well and that's a sign that Evans' career is going well thus far.

Post match the beatdown is on but here are the Street Profits for the save to clear the ring.

We look back to Jacob Fatu attacking Eric Andre earlier tonight.

Fatu tells Roman Reigns that he took care of LA Knight but the Usos weren't happy. Reigns knew that would be the case and he gets what Fatu while they don't. He needs Fatu to do one more thing though and whispers it in his ear. Fatu seems to get it.

Here's what's coming next week.

King Of The Ring Semifinals: Dominik Mysterio vs. Oba Femi

Mysterio's AAA Mega Title isn't on the line and he has JD McDonagh with him. Mysterio immediately bails out to the floor for a good while. Back in and Femi gets caught with a dropkick, only to chase Mysterio outside for a tackle over the announcers' table. McDonagh's distraction lets Mysterio load up the hammer into his boot and it's a low blow to put Femi down. The 619 and frog splash connect...with the kickout sending Mysterio flying. McDonagh comes in but it's a double chokeslam, with both of them getting nailed with running uppercuts. The Fall From Grace finishes Mysterio at 4:36.

Rating: C+. This was a good way to go as it wasn't could Femi crush Mysterio but rather how would he get through the nonsense to get his hands on him. Femi feels more and more like a force every single day but he has Brock Lesnar waiting for him at least one more time. For now though, he probably has Jey Uso up next and that should be enough.

Post match Femi says he's a win away from his crown. He'll face whomever he has to, including Brock Lesnar. Femi used to look up to Lesnar but now he isn't even sure if Lesnar is a man. He invites Lesnar to come face him again and hopes Lesnar will man up instead of running again.

Overall Rating: C+. There was only so much good on this show, with the best parts focusing on the tournament semifinals. Those worked as usual, but they only got this show so far. Rollins vs. Breaker in a cage is fine in theory, but I'm really not that interested in seeing it as things have cooled off a bit. This wasn't a bad show overall, though it's firmly in the mediocre range.

Results

Iyo Sky b. Raquel Rodriguez – Over The Moonsault

Chad Gable b. Rusev – Ankle lock

Charlotte b. Roxanne Perez – Figure Eight

Je'Von Evans b. Austin Theory via DQ when Bron Breaker interfered
