

Delays This Week/Weekend

Hey everyone. As you might have noticed, things have been a bit slow over the last few days. My wife has bronchitis and the flu and our son is coughing and sneezing so I've been trying to help take up some of the slack with him. Now I seem to have gotten at least some of what she has so it's been a lot of sleeping on and off without as much focus on work. I still plan to cover everything I do but it might be a bit slower than usual as I'm not really moving very fast as I also fell while out on a walk the other day and got pretty banged up. I'll be getting the weekend shows up ASAP and I already have the first Wrestlemania Redo of the year done. I'm sorry for the slower pace and I'll get it done as soon as I can.

Thanks as always,

KB

Sorry For All Of The Delays

I've been under the weather for about two weeks with side effects of the Covid booster and now a nasty ear infection. The idea of wanting to do anything other than the major shows has left me very tired so some of them are a bit delayed. I'll be caught up soon though as I'm already on some medicine. Again, I'm sorry for being slow but when walking to the kitchen required a 20 minute rest, the energy isn't quite there for all of the reviews.

KB

Thanks Again Everyone

Monday was again a record setting day here as I hit a new high in page views. The original (and by that I mean the first time I started paying attention) record stood for 9 months. This one lasted 26 days. Thank you all for that.

Two more things: 1. Just to brag a bit more, I was used as a source for the first time that I know of:

http://sports.yahoo.com/top/news;_ylt=AjiwGy42N9.xM6s6bYrE5_c5nYcB?slug=ycn-10871165

Click on the link about ECW's first show.

2. Starting this coming Saturday, I won't be reviewing as fast for the next two weeks. Odds are the Rumble review won't be up in full but I'll likely be watching the show and I'll give my thoughts on it. Sorry for the delays but it's out of my hands.

Thanks again,

KB