I don't get shaken up by wrestling deaths too often but what the heck man? Apparently he had some kind of a non-Covid lung issue and passed away after spending time at the Mayo Clinic. His last match was against Cody in the dog collar match for the TNT Title on October 7 and he hasn't been mentioned since. There is nothing good to say about this and that is absolutely terrible. If any kind of a GoFundMe or anything is put up for his family I'll edit it in here.

Also, this is part of a really cool series WWE did called Formerly Known As, looking at a wrestler's rise from their beginnings to WWE. Luke Harper was featured and it's worth a look:
