

Diamonds Are Forever

And so are we, assuming she lets me watch Battleground this Sunday.

Greetings From England

I got here earlier today and am all settled now, meaning I'll be able to start in on Raw tomorrow. I've read the results and there really doesn't seem to be much to talk about. If I don't get Raw up tomorrow, there will definitely be a column and Nitro up as they've been done in advance.

Thanks for your patience,

KB

Episode 16

I'm back....eventually. I join NorCal about ten minutes in to talk about TNA's latest woes, ROH, the Beast in the East and Battleground. Plus Dimension X.

New Idea For The Count-Ups (You Can Vote!)

So I'll be doing the annual count-ups this year, but as usual I won't be redoing all of them. Instead I'll let you guys decide something for a change.

Here's the thing: I'm not going to redo all the shows again for two reasons:

1. It takes too long. It takes the better part of two and a half months to do nearly thirty pay per views given all the other shows I do every week. That would add up to about ten months to review shows for a third time. That brings me to the other point.

2. There's nothing left to say about a lot of the matches. Most of the matches on these shows don't really have a lot to talk about. How much can I say about Texas Tornado vs. Dino

Bravo for three minutes at Wrestlemania VII? There are some matches worth looking at again, but I'm never been a fan of splitting up a show.

Therefore, I'll do something else instead and I'll leave it up to you. In addition to doing the show from the previous year for Royal Rumble, Wrestlemania, Summerslam and Survivor Series, but I'll also do one (or maybe two) show from each series.

You get to pick which ones I do. Let me know in the comments which shows you want me to do and I'll redo whichever gets the most votes.

Wrestling Wars Podcast Episode 15

NorCal on Dusty Rhodes passing. This is a rare solo show.
