

Wrestlemania XXX Preview: Divas Title: Vickie Guerrero Invitational

The winner literally beats the entire division. We've been saying AJ loses the title in the big finale to Total Divas for months now, but for once I think it doesn't happen. Instead I see AJ hanging onto the title so Paige can win the title on Raw. The Total Divas would rather yell at each other over their latest drama and the title has only been mentioned occasionally. AJ winning and issuing an open challenge on Raw is a great way to go, but this is going to be completely insane no matter what happens so why bother trying to talk about the match itself?

Divas Title Match Announced For Wrestlemania

It's quite a match too. AJ will be one of FOURTEEN DIVAS in a single match for the title. Her challengers include the Funkadactyls, the Bella Twins, Natalya, Eva Marie, Emma, Aksana, Alicia Fox, Summer Rae, Rosa Mendes, Layla and Tamina. Vickie set it up for AJ insulting her on Smackdown, because Vickie can make matches for a PPV on Raw.

2013 Awards: Promo Of The Year

We've got a few options here but a handful stand out about others. First up is Mark Henry retiring. This worked for one reason: I bought it. I totally believed he was done and was actually sad to see him go. I didn't think he had a chance to win the title at the PPV, but this worked perfectly for the time being. Unfortunately it led to a one off match and Henry is a smiling face again.

Second and the runner up is AJ Lee vs. the Total Divas. As someone who watched every episode of Total Divas (good looking women in small outfits being completely over the top in a fake scripted show with wrestlers making cameos? You couldn't sign me up fast enough), I was literally cheering for her as she ripped that show limb from limb. The problem again here is the follow up. WWE relied on the idea that the fans were going to like the Total Divas, even though AJ has run circles around them (literally at certain points). AJ is portrayed as the heel here and that just doesn't work, especially when AJ has mauled them at every opportunity.

This brings us to the winner: CM Punk vs. Paul Heyman after Money in the Bank. Here's why it worked: it had a history, it had logic, it had hatred, and most importantly of all, it was leading up to a professional wrestling match. CM Punk vented his frustration against Heyman, swearing vengeance against Heyman for costing him the world title. The obstacle in Punk's way: the Beast Incarnate, Brock Lesnar. This was setting up David vs. Goliath, but Goliath was standing in the way of David's real target. That's wrestling in a nutshell people, and you had two of the best out there talking about it, and that's why it's the best of the year.

2013 Awards: Worst Match Of The Year

Again, not something that took long to think of. It's the Total Divas vs. True Divas match from Survivor Series. Not only was the work horribly sloppy, but Cole lost track of who was still in. Yeah the girls look great in their tiny outfits, but that doesn't mean the match is worth watching.

The runner up is Big Show vs. Randy Orton from the same show, though I didn't find it nearly as bad as everyone else. That being said, one thing is clear: Survivor Series SUCKED.

WWE's New Low

I didn't pick up on this during the live broadcast but it's very obvious after a bit more thought. Last night Vickie Guerrero kept "fainting" in her match and asked for water to help her through it. This was meant as a rib on AJ Lee for collapsing due to dehydration during the European tour.

Once I realized that's what was happening, I was genuinely disgusted. AJ Lee has done more good for the Divas Division since probably Laycool and they mock her because she was working too hard. That's how much WWE thinks of its employees. We have to sit through the painfully boring Total Divas matches and have Brie Bella forced down our throats because she's a "reality" TV "star" as WWE desperately tries to get fans to stop cheering AJ, and now she's ribbed after having what could have been a serious medical issue? Less than 15 months ago Jerry Lawler was this close to dying on national TV, but AJ is just a Diva so what difference does she make right?

Pitiful.

Total Divas Is GLORIOUS

If you can, make sure to catch the replay of this. It's one of the funniest shows I've seen in years and is far more of a train wreck than the previews made it out to be. Find a copy of it and kick back for an hour because it's the funniest thing a wrestling fan has seen in a long time.
